'Sex life in LA' consists of two documentary-style features that turn a stark and honest eye on the gay film industry in Los Angeles. It compares and contrasts the lives of three retired porn actors with three young, up-and-coming adult stars. Driven by a sense of adventure and narcissism, it incisively tracks the fortunes of a group of young, gay actors who live in an apartment fitted with web cams in the hope of achieving stardom in their industry. Director Jochen Hick, who spent years infiltrating the highly secretive pornography industry in the Hollywood hills, pulled no punches in making these documentaries and takes his audience on a riveting journey into the world of low-budget sex films.

It tells tales of AIDS, alcoholism and drugs. It tells tales of desperation of being kicked out of "the hotel". It tells that actors do not make money out of it, while producers and distributors pocket all the money. Sex Life in L.A. offers a unique insight to the other side of what people do not normally see.
